

Colors

Navy blue is your anchor color. It's the dominant trust signal in financial, legal, and medical contexts for good reason — it reads as stable, authoritative, and credible without feeling cold. For a buyer evaluating a six-figure acquisition, navy reduces perceived risk.

Baby blue speaks to the buyer. It signals possibility, clarity, and a fresh start — not inexperience. A buyer stepping into ownership for the first time responds to a color that communicates the path forward is open and navigable. Use it on next steps, onboarding moments, or calls to action.

Warm gray is underrated here. It keeps financial data, timelines, and legal disclosures neutral and readable. It also prevents the palette from feeling too corporate or sterile, which is important when you're dealing with someone's life's work.

Colors

Navy blue is your anchor color. It's the dominant trust signal in financial, legal, and medical contexts for good reason — it reads as stable, authoritative, and credible without feeling cold. For a buyer evaluating a six-figure acquisition, navy reduces perceived risk.

Gold (used sparingly) speaks to the seller. It signals earned value, legacy, and achievement — not flash. A seller who spent 25 years building a practice responds to a color that communicates their work was worth something. Use it on milestone callouts, valuation highlights, or headline numbers.

Warm gray is underrated here. It keeps financial data, timelines, and legal disclosures neutral and readable. It also prevents the palette from feeling too corporate or sterile, which is important when you're dealing with someone's life's work.

Logo Options

Every logo here is built from the same palette — navy, gold, baby blue — so no matter which direction you choose, the brand stays coherent. What you're really deciding is personality.

The compass and star marks say guidance and expertise — you've done this before, and you know the way. The shield says protection and trust — we're in your corner. The interlocking shapes say continuity and connection — this isn't an ending, it's a handoff. The geometric marks say precision and forward motion — we're modern, efficient, and clear-eyed.

Font Option 1

Header Font
PLAYFAIR DISPLAY
body font option
INTER

Font Option 2

Header Font
LIBRE BASKERVILLE
body font option
SOURCE SANS 3